

MA in RESEARCH FOR POLICY AND EVALUATION

Through courses and a four-month internship, the program focuses on developing students' skills in collecting, analyzing, interpreting and communicating research for real-world applications.

This combines the research strengths of Western's Faculty of Social Science with the practical tools needed to apply research skills to a variety of settings. The internship cements these skills and provides connections to employment opportunities.

One-year (three-term) Professional Master's program with an emphasis on social science research skills for positions in government, not-for-profit and private sectors.

"We aim to build an inclusive student body in terms of background and perspective, including a blend of recent graduates and those drawn from the workforce."

Dr. Michele Manocchi, Internship Coordinator

"What sets this program apart is its interdisciplinary nature focusing on knowledge across the social sciences, the focus on solid research skills that can be applied in a broad array of work environments, and the mix of research and professional skill development."
